IN THE POSTS OF HONOR

American Girls Feted at a Swell London Society Event.

Jaunts of Washingtonians in Search of Health and Happiness—Gossip of the Gay World.

A very pretty wedding occurred last evening at the Independent Methodist Church, on Eleventh street southeast, when Mr. Harry E. Beavans, an electrician at the Capitol, and Miss Susie Cole were joined in wedlock by the Rev. Jacob B. Wilson, pastor of the church.

The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Murray Allen, who were within a week themselves before the marriage altar, and Messrs. J. Allen and Clarence Talbert served as ushers.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of a large audience, and at its conclusion the bride and groom received the congratulations of numerous personal friends, among whom are exceedingly popular.

The wedding supper, to which the relatives and immediate friends were bidden, was served at the future home of Mr. and Mrs. Beavans, on Twelfth street southeast.

The bride was the recipient of numerous presents, among them being an offering from Mr. Beavans' associates at the Capitol.

Among the guests were Miss Schuler, Miss Nannie Nesbitt, Miss Shinn, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Gleim and son, "Butter," Mr. and Mrs. S. Dean, Mrs. E. Dean, Misses E. and M. Cole, and Mrs. A. Childs.

At the re-employment of Guy's Hospital, which occurred in London under the patronage of the Prince of Wales, the Duchess of Marlborough and Lady Randolph Churchill, both American girls, occupied the posts of honor during the evening.

The Duchess of Marlborough, formerly Miss Constance Vanderbilt, who was escorted by the Prince of Wales, was, of course, the cynosure of all eyes, and her magnificent gown did full honor to the occasion.

The costume was the latest creation of a Parisian modiste, and was adorned with rare old lace and magnificent jewels. In her hair was a tangle of rare gems, and she carried a large bouquet of costly flowers.

The duchess' bouquet was one of the striking features of the occasion.

It will be noticed that it is remarkable for its size and the great quantity of ribbon with which it is tied. Large bouquets are carried at London weddings, but no such bunch of flowers has been seen before in England at a great function. The big bouquet is an innovation, and its use will probably become a custom among the fashionable in London.

Mr. B. F. Smith of Ft. Street will leave tomorrow for an extended trip.

Mr. B. H. Warner and family are summering in New Jersey. The young ladies of the family will visit several watering places during the season.

Miss Katie Smith, of Passaic, N. J., is in the city, a guest of Mrs. Barnock, in South Washington.

Dr. George E. Ricker left this morning for his annual camping trip to Lake Onawa, Me.

Miss Kate Cuthbert will leave Friday for a week's stay at Atlantic City prior to her departure for Bangor, Me., where she will remain until September.

Miss Mattie Nichols will entertain Miss Catherine Davis of New London, Conn., and Miss Lucy Harrover of Boston during the convention. Both ladies arrived last night.

Mr. John E. Parker of N street left for New York yesterday. He will sail for Germany the latter part of the month to remain until October.

Mrs. Emily Garrison and Miss May Garrison have taken a cottage at Asbury Park. They will be joined in a few days by Mr. John Garrison and his wife and baby son.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Addison are spending the summer at Nantasket.

Mr. Charles W. Needham is at Newport, where he has taken a cottage for the season.

Senator Brice and family, who are now abroad, are expected to be at Newport the latter part of July.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Perrine are summering at Jamestown, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Chastard are making a lengthy stay in London, where they are at No. 8 Cork street, West.

Bishop Hurst has gone with his family to Marion, Mass., where they will spend the summer.

Miss Elsie B. Watkins has postponed, on account of the weather, the garden fête which she was to have given tonight in honor of her guests, Misses Josephine and Sara Ellinger of Oswego, N. Y., who are here for the convention.

Mrs. F. B. Murray and sons, Donald and Paul, are summering in the Blue Mountains with Mrs. Murray's sister, Mrs. John Spahr.

Much interest centers in the Buzzard's Bay region, 'tween that Gray Gables is bright and beautiful with its flower gardens, stretch of green lawn, and well-kept drives and walks. The presence of Mrs. Cleveland, who is perhaps better known there than elsewhere, as she has been there every season since her marriage, has started the social ball rolling.

Prince Raoul Wrede of the Austro-Hungarian legation, who was so popular in Washington society the past winter, has leased the Cochran cottage at Bar Harbor.

Mrs. George W. Childs arrived in London last week. Mrs. Childs' splendid residence on K street has been closed for some time.

Mrs. John Frederick May and her daughter are at Bar Harbor for the fashionable summer season.

Mr. Robert Keeling, brother of Mrs. Stilson Hutchins, will return to this city from Paris as soon as Mr. Hutchins arrives in the latter city. Mr. Keeling accompanied his sister abroad last April.

INVESTIGATION OF HIS DEATH.

Charges Made That Young Collins Died From Effect of a Kicking.

District Attorney Briney will be asked to investigate the death of William Collins, colored, who died under unusual circumstances at No. 407 N street northwest, a week ago. The matter is in the hands of Attorneys Langston and Jones.

They called at the district attorney's office yesterday, to lay the facts before Mr. Briney, but he was busy elsewhere.

The boy was at a garden party on Q street on the evening of June 30, and had some words with Policeman Cooper, who was on duty. It is said the officer knocked him down and kicked him several times.

Young Collins went home and soon began vomiting. He became easier later in the night, but the next morning was found dead in bed.

Deputy Coroner Glazebrook held an inquest and the jury failed to find any one responsible for the death. It is claimed there were several witnesses of the kicking, and the attorneys propose to have the body examined for a medical examination to show the cause of the death.

Mr. Briney said if the matter were brought before him he would, of course, hold an investigation, and if the facts alleged proved true he would institute prosecution.

STABBED IN THE SIDE.

Ex-President of the Seamen's Union Probably Fatally Wounded.

Toledo, Ohio, July 8.—William Molles, who says he was formerly president of the Seamen's Union of Buffalo, N. Y., but recently a resident of Chicago, was found in Washington street about midnight Monday morning, and he died about two hours later.

He had an apparently dying condition. He had been stabbed in the left side below the ribs, the knife penetrating the lung. Yesterday morning he was conscious long enough to give his name and tell the name of the man who stabbed him, Tom Hennessey, a Chicagoan.

Last night Hennessey was seen to board a boat and start out toward the lake. Officers went in pursuit, and a little after 9 o'clock captured him and locked him up in the city prison. It is thought Molles will live.

ARTIST ALDEN A LIFE SAVER.

Rescued Two Ladies Who Came Very Near Drowning.

Cottage City, Mass., July 8.—Charles F. Alden, the New York artist, saved the lives of Mrs. C. Casper and Miss Florence Cowan of New York at the bathing beach yesterday. Joseph B. Gardner of Cambridge was also instrumental in the rescue.

The bathers got beyond their depth and Mr. Alden swam to their assistance. In their struggles they bore him beneath the surface many times, but by a supreme effort he got them near the shore, where they were taken in charge by Mr. Gardner, who was about 100 feet in remarkably quick time. The ladies were in a very exhausted condition.

The party will be the guests of Mr. C. E. Wood, of Wood, Harwood & Co., the real estate men. It will consist of Postmaster General William L. Wilson, Assistant Postmaster General R. A. Maxwell, Public Printer Thomas E. Benedict, Assistant Superintendent A. W. Machen, of the general post office, C. E. Wood, Postmaster H. H. Baker of Buffalo, James Hutchins of Cleveland, John J. No attention will be given to business matters, except the necessary and important character. Rest and amusement will be the order every day from beginning to end.

The gentlemen will not out themselves to any particular routine, and will vary, at their pleasure, the program laid out, but the following itinerary has been planned to include the general course of their tour.

The Amadis will leave the Cleveland dock Company's dock at Cleveland at 1 p. m. and July 12. In the evening Put-In-Bay will be reached and some good sport is promised. Noon of the next day will see them at Detroit, where mail and telegrams will be received at the marine postoffice. Marie, where the party will remain two days, going on July 23 to Pictured Rocks, where they will stay the following day also.

The homeward journey will begin from Marquette, which will be reached July 25. Mail will be received there. From there they will return to the Saint, then Cheneaux Islands on the 27th, Thunder Bay 28th, Saginaw Bay 29th, Port Huron 30th for mail, St. Clair Flats 31st, Detroit for mail August 1, and St. Ignace same day, Cleveland August 2.

The Washington portion expect to reach home August 3.

PARTNERS DISAGREE.

Troubles of a Bottling Firm Aired in the Courts.

Henry F. Woodard, as attorney, this morning brought suit against Emmanuel and Sarah Rosenweig against Harry R. Stover and Thomas O. Anderson for dissolution of partnership, for the appointment of a receiver, and for an injunction against the defendants disposing of partnership property. With the bill were filed three affidavits.

Mr. Rosenweig says that on June 29 they sold a half interest in their bottling establishment, at No. 218 Four and a half street, to Stover and Anderson. Stover and Anderson were manufacturing, bottling, and selling what is known as "soft drinks." It was agreed that the business should be run by Stover and Anderson, and that they were to put in additional stock and furnish more horses and wagons.

They not only failed to do this, but on Monday last came to the business place both drunk and demanded that the place be turned over to them. He refused, and they seized a horse and two wagons which belonged to the business and "spirited them away." He asked that these be returned, so that customers could be served. Not only did Stover and Anderson refuse this, but they made threats, and were so violent that he had to lock the door and call for police protection.

The affidavits of Louis and Flora Sustind, employed at the store, and Joseph Katz, the driver. They agree in stating that Anderson and Stover came to the place on July 6, both drunk, and raised a disturbance. Anderson swore they owned the place; that he was "boss," and would do what he pleased. He emphasized his remarks by smashing the glass case and scattering the bottles. The two men drove away customers and were ruining the business. Mr. Katz adds that they tried to get his horse and wagon away from him.

Mr. Woodard secured a restraining order, returnable July 14.

JUDGE COLE'S HUMOR.

It Was Enjoyed by the Court Spectators During a Trial.

Andrew Michaels, a one-armed peddler, and Jennie Clay were convicted before Judge Cole this morning. Michaels was remanded for sentence and Jennie was given the limit, three years in the penitentiary. She had stolen some clothing from Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sellinger.

Michaels broke into the residence of Dr. Charles B. Robinson, 240 C street northwest, and attempted to assault Dr. Robinson. He was drinking at the time, and it is claimed, was irresponsible. Judge Cole said drinking did not excuse Michaels. When Mr. Jeffords moved for a sentence, however, and said he thought the man deserved mercy, as recommended by the jury, the judge said he would take the case under consideration till Saturday.

Lawyer Moss defended Michaels purely out of humanity. He took the stand for his protegee, and said the man gave all evidence of having been on a protracted spree.

"I'm not an expert, though," he hastened to say, in answer to a question from Mr. Jeffords.

"Well, I don't dare cross-examine him on that point," remarked Mr. Jeffords.

"What are we waiting for?" asked Judge Cole, as Mr. Moss left the stand and there was a little delay.

"In debating whether I shall testify," answered Mr. Jeffords.

"Why, are you an expert?" asked the court.

Old-Time Political Friends Now Bitter Enemies.

WERE TOGETHER ONCE

Men Who Once Stood Side by Side Now Arrayed Against Each Other in the Democratic Convention—Senator Hill Has Gained Future Supremacy Through His Last Defeat.

The work accomplished up to this time by the Democratic national convention, in session at Chicago, although important in its own peculiar way, chiefly serves to illustrate the remarkable party changes that may occur within the period of four years. The men who figured yesterday as leaders of one faction or the other also took a prominent part in the last convention, but for the consummation of vastly different ends.

In 1892 Senator Daniel made an eloquent speech seconding the nomination of David B. Hill for the Presidency. Then, as now, both were associates in the United States Senate. Yesterday Daniel defeated Hill by an overwhelming vote for the comparatively empty honor of presiding for a few brief hours over the deliberations of the convention and naming some pre-selected committees. There has been no essential change in the relative financial views entertained by these two men, but the conditions have so changed as to place one in an awkward position that was not possible four years ago.

STRONGER THAN EVER.

But, although Senator Hill is both in position and a rather severe defeat, he is stronger today than under the influence of his higher ambitions, and received the support of those who then sought to antagonize him. In both conventions he received the solid vote of his own State delegation.

In 1892 Ex-Secretary Whitney and some of the most prominent factors in New York politics made the effort of their lives to encompass the overthrow of Mr. Hill, while Whitney these same politicians struggled with equal vigor for his success. His Presidential aspirations were extinguished in a way that left a strong flavor of humiliation, whereas, his failure to be chosen temporary chairman had a tendency to lionize him.

It is a fact admitted by all men of good sense, common sense that the minority in the Democratic party today must eventually become the controlling element of that party when the prevailing fever silver madness shall have somewhat abated. Mr. Hill may be in a position to reap the benefits of his present self-sacrifice. His recent meritorious record in the Senate has completely rekindled in him the good graces of those who but a couple of years ago sought to read him out of the party, and his good fight in the pending convention has raised him in the feeling of a hero. He is once more the idol of his own State and in first-class standing with the party as a whole.

This prestige he will be able to hold, notwithstanding his retirement from the Senate on the 30th of next March and will again come to the front as the foremost leader of the New York Democracy. His complete rehabilitation could have been accomplished in no other way than by his defeat under the adverse circumstances which have just transpired.

NOW HIS FRIENDS.

When Mr. Whitney and his allies four years ago succeeded in clipping the wings of Senator Hill at the Chicago convention of 1892, he resumed his career in the Senate as a suspicious and mistrusted politician, and was the victim of countless knives in his own State. The disrepute into which he had fallen was illustrated by his defeat for the governorship by a majority of 150,000.

Since that time he has done nothing but what is calculated to strengthen his position and add to his popularity. For several years Mr. Hill's course in the Senate has been such as to influence the good opinions of those who had previously reviled him and his recent record, coupled with his courageous stand for the sound money principles of the East, will cause him to return to New York with a greater following in his leadership. This may be weakened, but not to any considerable extent, by his retirement from the Senate.

GOLD BRICKS WERE BOGUS

Ancient Bunco Game Involving Well-Known Men Here.

TEST MADE AT THE MINT

Hackneyed Tale of Woe Related by a Steerer's Victim Who Was Hardly Able to Believe the Bars Were Brass—He Got Them From an Arizona Miner for Money.

Two shining gold-colored bars, each about two feet long, supposed to be worth about $30,000, were yesterday taken to be tested at the Philadelphia mint by W. H. Pennell, a consulting engineer, and other gentlemen, whose name cannot be learned, both of this city.

They departed some time later from the mint, one of them a poorer and wiser man, with faith shaken in mankind and one Arizona miner, the steerer, who had worked upon him the ancient but ever new gold brick game to the tune of considerable money.

The bars are not gold; they are simply ingots of brass, covered with several coats of ordinary gold paint, and if sold would not bring enough money to buy their owner a suit of clothes.

In this case the victim was not an unsophisticated farmer, but a man well known in this city, well dressed, intelligent and well off. Mr. Pennell is his friend, and was as confident that the bars were bogus as the other man was that they were pure gold.

Mr. Pennell, who was willing to wager sixteen to one, proved to be right.

Into the mint the two walked yesterday morning, carrying the gold bars, which were carefully wrapped in cotton flannel and oil cloth covers. The latter were for the purpose of keeping the dampers from tarnishing the gold. They took the bars to the acting assayer, who pronounced them bogus while the covers were being removed.

NOT SO HEAVY AS GOLD.

The two men were astonished at this statement, in view of the fact that they had not even disclosed the bars to view. "How do you know they are not gold when you haven't seen them?" was the natural query.

"Because you couldn't carry a gold bar the size of that," was the instant reply. "If that
